An outdoor classroom

Mother Nature's Classroom

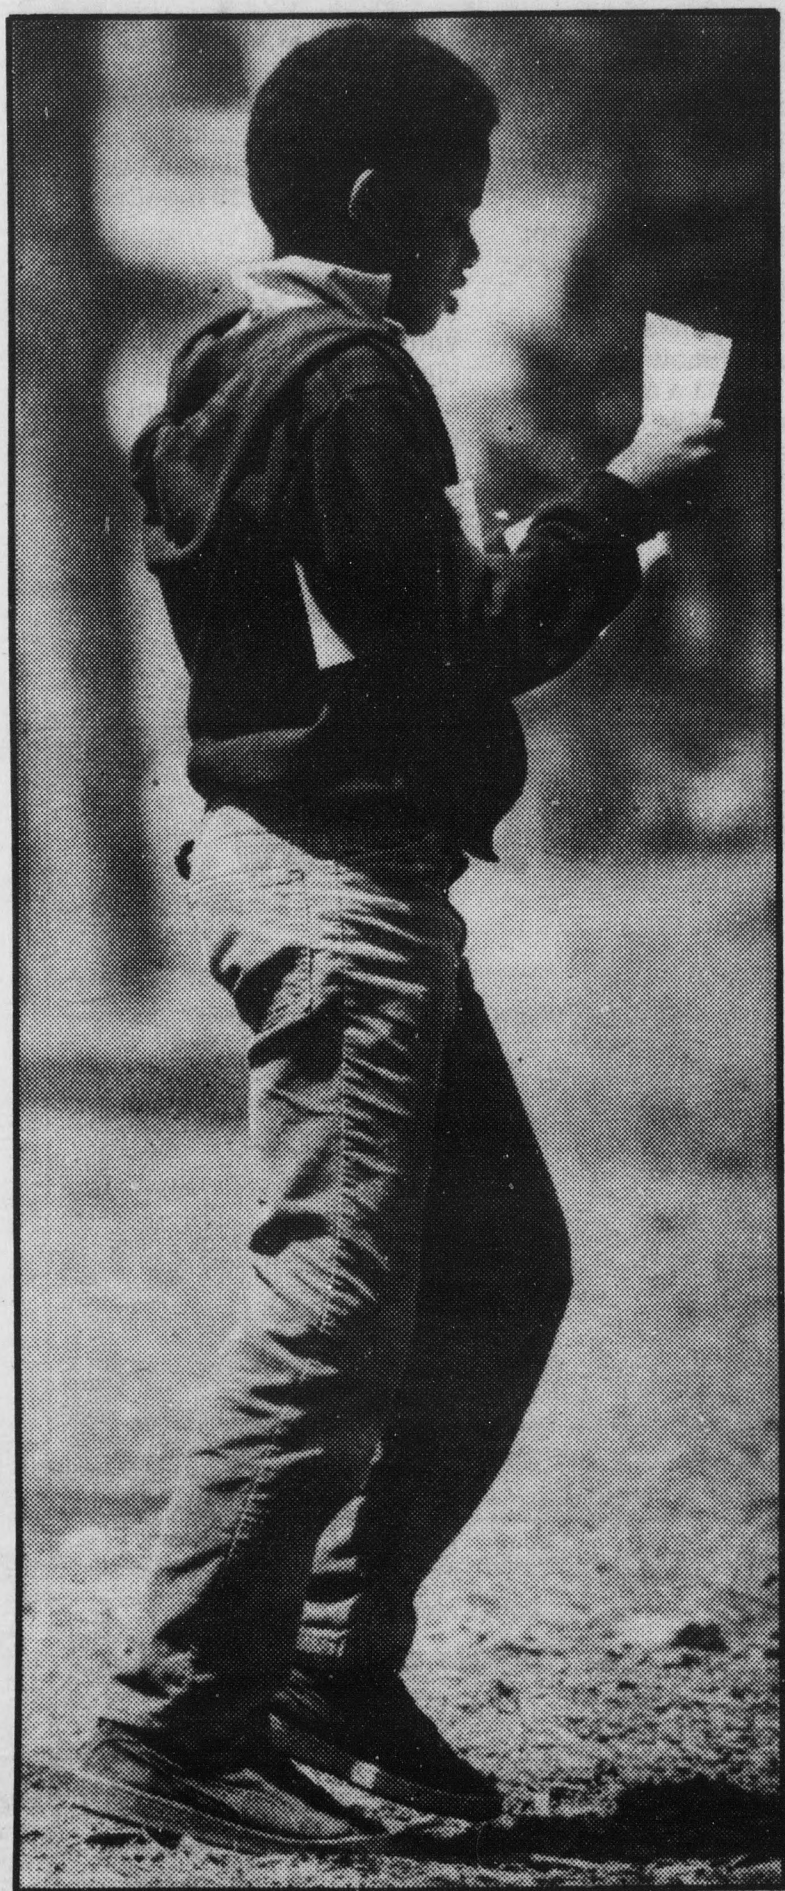

Sycamore School students in Upland went wild about education. Tall majestic trees and cool mountain springs replaced the classroom when the fifth and sixth graders participated in a week-long outdoor education program.

Story by Suzanne Sproul

Photos by Alexander Gallardo

Seventy seven students from three classes dressed in jeans; packed up a week's clothing and rations and headed for the San Bernardino Mountains for some hands-on experience in Mother Nature's classroom.

The Upland School District is one of several area systems which participates yearly in the outdoor education program. Camp O-Ongo, near Running Springs and Big Bear, sponsors the project. This year camp manager Tom Preston had to rent nearby Ponderosa Pines to accommodate students.

One Upland school participated in the program six years ago. Today five of the district's elementary schools head for the mountains each year, according to Asa Bert, Sycamore teacher.

"This isn't all fun and games. The children have a classroom setting where they have lectures from naturalists. The students then go out and see and experience what they've just learned," Bert said.

The rigid schedule includes classes, trail work, town hall meetings and astronomy. It isn't all work, though. Students and teachers also take some longer hikes and entertain each other with skits.

The children have an hour of F.O.B. (flat on their back) time each day when they rest or spend time in their cabins.

Camp cooks handled the three meals each day, but students were required to set the tables, serve, clean up and help with the dishes.

"We've asked the kids each year what they thought about the program. Most all say that this week in the mountains is probably the most outstanding thing they remember about elementary school," Bert said.

Each child paid $72 for the week's activities. The rest of the program's cost was paid by money the school collected with fund-raisers.

For some of the students the week at camp was their first time in the mountains and probably the longest they have been away from their parents, according to Lynda Cretser, Sycamore teacher.

Before students switched classrooms they learned the vocabulary associated with the outdoors and camping. Bert, who has made the mountain trip three times during the years, said he would like to see the students participate in a similar program but one involving the desert.

Although the Sycamore group didn't exactly rough it, students had a lot of eye openers. Ever try cooking a hamburger on a can over a makeshift fire of pine needles on a windy day? "It's not easy.

On the cover: Ponderosa Pines counselors and Sycamore students join in together for a little singing session. Naturalist Jill McIntyre and student Billy Metz examine water samples from a nearby camp stream (far left). Students spent a portion of their day taking samples as part of their outdoor education program. Kendrick Brooks waits eagerly for news from home (left). Anyone receiving three or more letters has to serenade his fellow campers. Each day begins with inside classroom instruction (right) before students move outdoors into Mother Nature's classroom. The outdoor education program isn't all work as these Sycamore School girls show as they practice for the camp skit.

Dust was blowing everywhere," student Rochelle Sheffey said.

Waking up just after dawn and putting in a full day's work made for some tired elementary students. "Is it only lunch? This day is going so slow. I thought it was dinner," Rochelle said one day.

Others were confused about exactly what time it was in the mountains. "It's only 12:45 p.m. Is it the same time at home?" student Kendrick Brooks asked.

"Of course it's the same time. You're only about an hour away from home," Cretser answered.

Camp naturalists and counselors scheduled daily activities for the children. One popular activity involved testing the water in the camp's spring for hardness and pollution content.

Students collected small vials of water so naturalist Jill McIntyre could test the water. Of course some students decided to test the water themselves by taking off their shoes and wading down the stream.

Students were tested on the information they learned throughout the week. No grades were given, though. "It's a reflection of the job the teachers have done," Cretser said.

The week of fun and adventure in the mountains was hectic but most of the students said they wanted to do it again and soon.

"Everything has been fun. The food has been real good but the best thing is making friends," student Jennifer Pedersen said. □

Teacher will add a little punch to needle classes

By Terri Tirella

Upland Recreation Department is going to add a little punch — needle punch, that is — to its summer classes. The new craft workshop will be taught by a long-time Upland resident Cora King.

"I've always been a craft oriented enthusiast and have tried my hand at anything and everything that comes out," King said.

The technique utilizes a method of punching a special needle through the material one is working with. The gauge of the needle determines the length of the loop made during the procedure.

"It's like a form of embroidery, but it has heavier thread so there is more depth than you might get with a sewing-type needle," King said.

"The needle is easier to handle, plus it's fast," she said. "You can do a small pattern in an hour."

Needle punching can be done on any kind of material except satins and silks, King said. It can be put on pillows, wall hangings, clothing or framed by itself, the items can be washed as long as the material worked on is washable.

Some punchers have done squares for quilts. Embellishing table linens and jackets is another favorite use of the craft, King said.

"All the work is done on the back of the material," King said.

Special immunization clinics will be held at local schools

Special immunization clinics will be held at local schools in Rancho Cucamonga in honor of May 1985 as the third annual Toddler Immunization Month for California.

Clinics will be held May 22 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at Central School, 7955 Archibald Ave.; and May 23 from 9 to 11 a.m. at Summit School, 13394 Summit Ave.

Toddlers Immunization Month is directed at children between 1 and 2 years of age who have not received the recommended immunizations.

Parents are encouraged to review their child's immunization records. Immunization will be available to all children two months through 18 months old at the clinics.

Children needing immunizations for kindergarten entry also may attend these clinics. All children must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

A $2 fee is charged per child, regardless of the number of immunizations received.

For more information, call the Immunization Program at 383-1441.

A special tool makes needle punch projects.

"It's so easy, it's almost like cheating."

King said she decided to teach the workshop because so many people seem to be interested in learning the skill.

A 23-year Upland resident, she said she has taken classes with Upland Recreation and kept combing the Muni-News, a city newsletter, for a needle punch class.

She also teaches needle punch for Ontario recreation and Pomona recreation departments, and has given demonstrations to different community groups.

Needle punch is an old skill, formerly called Russian embroidery, that is becoming more popular again, King said, because anyone can do it.

"Anyone, male, female, older people ... anyone who can handle a thick pencil can do it," she said. The only thing punchers have to watch out for is not stabbing their fingers on the underside of the project.

The class will cost $30, plus a $5 supply fee. Each student will get a kit with a needle punch, an instruction book, a pattern booklet, a spooler, needle threader, hoop, yarns, a pattern and fabric.

King, who is a nurse and full-time director of volunteers, also distributes needle punch materials, which she hopes will develop into a business she'll pursue after retiring from nursing.

She said that workshop instruction will include step-by-step instruction and students will leave class with almost-completed projects. "I give them my phone number so they can contact me if they have any problems later," she said.

"I don't want it (the needle punch kit) to sit on a shelf because someone hasn't gotten to it or haven't mastered the technique," King said. "It doesn't help them and it doesn't make my product look good and it doesn't help in resales."

For more information about needle punching, call King at 982-0844 after 5 p.m. To sign up for the workshop call 985-0994 or stop by Upland recreation, 651 W. 15th St. □

Students get first-hand look at government

By Suzanne Sproul

Upland Student Mayor Marty Long, straightened his jacket, eased forward into his chair and got ready to bang the gavel to begin the weekly city council meeting.

The City Hall meeting began but not before a quick chorus of "Mrs. Goggin." The call for help came as the students were attempting to work the machine council members use to record their votes.

Instead of voice votes, the Upland council uses an electronic board.

Teacher Sue Goggin solved the problem which appeared to be the only one students had last week when they participated in the annual student

Alta Loma Junior High spelling bee team is honored

The winning seventh-grade team in Alta Loma Junior High School's annual spelling bee was from Jimmette England's class. The spellers were Adrienne Wechselberg, Christy Brown, Heather Kolde and Benn Brindley.

The eighth-grade spelling champs were from Richard Shetley's class. They were: Paula Schricker, Mitchell Roberts, Alison Kuhns and Donald Stuit.

Each language arts class named a four-person team to compete in the spelling bee. The teams spelling the most words correctly moved into the final round.

This year's spelling bee was coordinated by teachers Janice Creasey and Vickie Duncan and involved 200 students.

government week activities.

Students throughout the West Valley have been participating in similar programs with their city governments.

Seniors elected students to replace city officials for the day. Those chosen then met with their city counterpart, talked to him about his duties and participated in a mock city council meeting covering everything from minor zoning problems to the impact of the federal budget on Upland.

During a discussion about a particular zoning request, even Upland Planning Commission Chairman Hank Houston got involved. "Once the meeting starts they're on their own," Goggin said.

Councilman Bob Nolan said he was impressed with the students involved with the program. "These are some sharp kids. I talked to them about a council member's routine and my routine as a member of the police and fire committee," Nolan said.

Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock reviewed governmental activities and procedures with the students before they started the meeting.

Students later had lunch and returned to the classroom.

The high school students participating in the program were: Long; Stephanie Woods, council; Denise Granger, council; Marissa Andrada, council; Eric Dale, council; Chuch Featherstone, city manager; Lisa Foster, city attorney; Paige Johnson, city clerk; Dan Gutierrez, fire chief; Jamie Howell, chief building official; Bill Adams, general services director; Jennifer Arjo, library director; and John Gibbons, personnel director.

Cindy Phillips of Alta Loma works on a desert scene at Rancho Cucamonga's Oil Painting class. "I just tried to paint at home and realized I needed some guidance," Phillips said.

Artist teaches oil painting from individual approach

By Terri Tirella

The smell of linseed oil and paint fills the room, along with soft music and an occasional soft murmuring of conversation.

A desert scene, in various stages of completion, can be viewed on canvases around the room. The scene, at first appears the same in each, but every one is a little different, as individual as the person creating it.

Drifting from easel to easel, with a word of encouragement or help with a technical problem is Marie Onti, oil painting instructor for Rancho Cucamonga's recreation classes.

She's been painting in oils for 20 years and teaching almost as long, including six years with Rancho Cucamonga residents.

"I'm a traditional naturalist," Onti says. She concentrates on landscapes: desert, forest, snow and seascapes. Her paintings are a combination of elements from different photographs she has taken.

Nature is what her students paint; they choose the subject matter and she demonstrates how to carry out the project step-by-step. "They decide if they want water in the painting, if they want moving water or still water with a reflection, if they want morning mist or another time of day," she says.

"Patience, perseverance and practice," are the keys to good oil painting, Onti says. She concentrates her instruction on stroke, color, perspective and how to use brushes.

"There is a 30 to 50 percent variation in each painting," Onti says. "Each student's painting can have a different light source, they put their own emotion into it, through color and brush strokes ... through the time of day or mood setting."

Onti says many of her students are older adults. "Most were doing something they always wanted to do — being creative, creating a freedom you can't get out of crocheting or sewing. Coming into their own where they once didn't have this self-expression."

"We didn't have the time to do what we wanted to before. We were too busy raising our families and working," says Millie Arnold of Alta Loma, who is taking the class at Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center. "I wanted some nice paintings for my home and hadn't been able to find any. I decided to learn to paint so I could paint them myself."

Cindy Phillips of Rancho Cucamonga says she learns a lot from hearing Onti helping other students. "I've come away with a lot more knowledge than in other classes I have taken."

"I enjoy painting and I've been doing charcoal and watercolors," says Rose Smits of Alta Loma. "I enjoy learning different techniques."

Anyone wishing to take the painting class should call the Neighborhood Center at 980-2634; or stop by during class on Wednesday, from 1 to 4 p.m. □

Carlos Carreon of Cucamonga has been named honorman for Recruit Company 36 at the Navy's Recruit Training Center. Carreon, 20, son of Carlos and Margaret Carreon of Cucamonga, was selected for the Navy League Award from among 84 fellow recruits who graduated from boot camp in ceremonies held in April.

"There's a lot of marching, and a lot of classes on things like first aid, damage control, and firefighting," Carreon said. "They spend a lot of time on education so you can apply the knowledge when you get to the fleet."

"I'm more motivated to further my education now," Carreon said. "Before I joined the Navy, school was no big thing to me. Now I realize how far you can go with it."

A 1983 graduate of Alta Loma High School, Carreon enlisted for eight years in the active Naval Reserve, and plans to augment to active duty after reporting to his reserve unit.

Museum will host open house

The Chaffey Communities Cultural Center Museum will have a special open house on Sunday, May 19, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Margaret Davidson will provide music and an autograph party will be held for the first printing of a recipe book by Mrs. George Whitney, a museum founder. Recipes date back to 1909 and were gathered through the years by Whitney's mother-in-law, Mrs. Olive Harrison Whitney.

Visitors are encouraged to brows through the museum which has Indian artifacts, citrus labels, a dental office dating back to 1924, a 1910 beauty show.

The museum is at 525 W. 18th St. in Upland, and is open to the public every Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, from 1 to 4 p.m. Tours may be arranged on any day of the week.

For additional information, call Beatrice Riggs at 981-5098 or the museum at 982-8010.

X-700 has a nice ring to it. The name is reminiscent of a supersonic test aircraft.

I remember the days when jet aircraft still were quite new — something only the avant-garde aircraft designers and German scientists knew very much about. Still, in the movies, where fiction often follows fact, there were stories about brave test pilots risking life and limb to put these new experimental (the "X" designation in all the names) aircraft through their paces.

Well, for one thing, the X-700 I'm about to tell you about isn't an experimental model, and testing it isn't likely to tempt me to "lay it all on the line." Nevertheless, Minolta's best standard 35mm SLR still offers just a touch of the swashbuckling excitement of strolling casually out on the tarmac, strapping yourself into the cockpit and giving the thumbs up sign to start the engines.

I called the X-700 the top of the "standard" line because of the recent introduction of the Maxxum. I reviewed the Maxxum in two columns several weeks ago and since it's an auto focus camera with interchangeable lenses, it pretty much falls into a class by itself.

The X-700 is a Program camera — and that means you have a "P" setting where the camera automatically sets both the aperture and shutter speed. The P program is designed to maintain the fastest, practicable shutter speeds as the light dims, guarding against blur from subject and camera movement. An LED readout in the viewfinder keeps the photographer informed about which shutter speed is being selected.

I've never been a big fan of camera-selected settings. However, if you need to move quickly to capture an otherwise elusive shot, you can be reasonably confident of getting a usable picture with the P program mode.

New ceremony marks 50 years of marriage

There must be a real streak of sentiment and romance in the Severo Martinez clan.

The elder Martinez', from Rancho Cucamonga, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with family in Elkhart, Indiana and watched their granddaughter, Laura, be married on the same weekend they repeated their vows.

The Martinez' were married March 17, 1935 in Redlands and have lived in the West Valley all of their married life. The couple repeated their vows in Sacred Heart Church in South Bend, Indiana on March 17 — 50 years to the day they were wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Severo Martinez.

Part of the renewal ceremony included a "monquerna," a Mexican tradition which involves the placing of a double-strand rosary around the couple to signify unity. It was presented by their grandson John R. Martinez, Jr. Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Martin Hunkler of St. Jude's in South Bend.

A family dinner followed the ceremony. Presented to the couple was a quilt handmade by their daughter-in-law Erma Martinez and titled "A Bed of Roses."

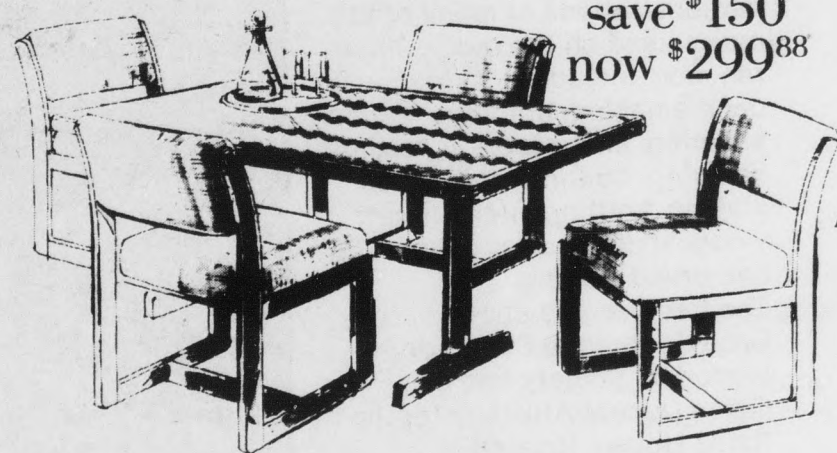

Two days earlier the couple watched their granddaughter Laura marry George Clark McCollough in St. Thomas the Apostle Church in Elkhart.

The elder Martinez have one son, John R. Martinez, Sr. who lives in Elkhart with his wife Erma, three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Turning back the clock at Rancho Days

Local Artists

Visitors to the Rains House will step back 110 years in history on May 18, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., during Rancho Days.

Rancho Days will feature demonstrations of many of the crafts used on the old Spanish ranchos, including candlemaking, branding, sheep shearing, embroidering, tatting, spinning, quilting, rag rug making, knitting, stenciling, woodcarving, butter churning and bread making.

The free event is sponsored by Casa de Rancho Cucamonga Historical Society and Las Guías Docent Auxiliary for the Rains House, located at Vineyard and Hemlock in Rancho Cucamonga.

"We don't know exactly what went on at this rancho," said Maxine Strane, curator of the Casa de Rancho Cucamonga. "But we do know they had to be self-sufficient, they had to make their own candles and tan hides ... and we're trying to show as much as we can."

"We've never had anything like this before," said Strane.

She said the house has been on historic home tours and has been the site of fiesta celebrations but this is the first historic re-creation effort.

Some of the crafts work will be displayed in the Rains House, some will be exhibited in the casa's kitchen and under the shade of trees or building overhangs, Strane said.

Strane, a former full-time teacher, said some of the demonstrations will offer hands-on experience for children. "We'll encourage children to try their hands on the butter churning plunger," she said. "Many children have never seen things like this and some of these processes. Many have studied the pioneer days and colonial days and it really ties into their school work."

"For students to see these things in process is really quite a thrill. It's a fun family outing." The event has been in the planning stages for a long time, almost four years, and is under the direction of Las

An old-fashion quilting bee will be held by members of the Night Owl Quilting Club during Rancho Days at the Rains House on May 18, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. "We hope to have a least four women working on a sampler quilt," said Mary Bourg, of Alta Loma. At left, Bourg works on one of her many quilts. Below, Carrie Parisian, caretaker for the Rains House, demonstrates candle-making.

Guias, the Rains House volunteer support group. "We've been keeping cards ... we saw Pat Holbrook (a local spinner) at the L.A. Fair spinning and asked if she might demonstrate for us sometime," Strane said. "Several of our demonstrators we had contacted last fall."

"Mostly we have found people with the know-how to show us," Strane said. "For many of the people it's a hobby." The craftsmen will be in the dress of the period.

Branding will be demonstrated by Bob Schmidt, principal of Jasper School in Rancho Cucamonga. The actual hide-burning processes will be done on pieces of leather, "we don't have a cow," Strane said.

Brian Lindstrom, a farrier graduate from Cal Poly Pomona, said he will be making horseshoes throughout the day. "I do shoeing for Loma Linda University and have other clients," Lindstrom said.

"It would be too dangerous to have him work on a horse because we don't have a corral or safe place to shoe," Strane said.

Mary Bourg, of Alta Loma, will demonstrate quilting with some of her friends. "We're going to be working on a sampler quilt, like in an old-fashioned quilting bee, trying to recapture some of the past," she said.

The quilters are from the Night Owl Quilters, an Upland quilting club; 10 women will alternate during the day. Other needleworkers are from the Baldy View Chapter of the Embroiders' Guild of America.

Stenciling is another craft to be demonstrated that's not used as often now. "Stenciling was a popular skill used on floors and on walls because there was no linoleum or wall paper in those times," Strane said.

Lamb shearing will be demonstrated at noon, while many of the other crafts will be shown continuously. Also featured during the day will be a blue grass band called the Buffalo Chips, performing from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Three special exhibits will be held during Rancho Days. A collection of old-time and new quilts will be on the beds and hanging on the walls of the house. A collection of antique thimbles, sewing kits, and a sewing bird, a brass bird with pin cushions, will be displayed. Showcased in the back courtyard will be Spanish and Mexican spurs, bits, la reata or lariat, horse blankets, saddles, a private collection belonging to Ray Swanson, a Rancho Cucamonga resident.

A Chinatown exhibit currently on display will continue to be exhibited, Strane said. Rancho Days was planned in honor of national Historic Preservation Week, May 13 through 19.

Two of the local historic societies will be selling food during the event. Las Guias will have homemade chili, coleslaw and homemade cornbread. The Etiwanda Historic Society will make homemade ice cream and lemonade.

Casa de Rancho Cucamonga is the recently restored Rains House. The Spanish-style house, made of hand-fired bricks of local clay, was built in 1859 by John and Dona Merced Rains on the original 13,000 land grant.

DEMONSTRATION TIMES

11 a.m. — Butter churning, farrier

12 p.m. — Candlemaking, sheep shearing

1 p.m. — Bread making, farrier

2 p.m. — Butter churning, candle making

3 p.m. — Bread making, farrier

Other handicraft skills will be shown continuously. □

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Former actress turns to first love: music

OAKLAND — In the early 1970s, Holly Near was on the verge of a successful acting career. She made guest appearances on such TV shows as "All in the Family," performed on Broadway in the musical "Hair" and was in the movie "Slaughterhouse Five."

However, in 1973, she joined an anti-war tour of Asia with actress Jane Fonda. She returned to the United States more politically involved, and drifted away from acting and back to music, her first love.

She wanted to record an album, so she started a company to produce and sell it. She named it after "the deepest-rooted thing" she knew — the redwood trees near her hometown of Ukiah, Calif.

Today, Redwood Records is firmly established as a producer and distributor of music — especially by women — with a progressive, political slant.

Redwood is on firm footing, thanks to Ms. Near's talent and the business acumen of partners Jo-Lynne Worley and Joanie Shoemaker.

"If this hadn't come along ... I would probably be either a Broadway performer or a film actress. And I would be one of those performers that when an issue comes up once or twice a year would do a benefit," Ms. Near said.

Instead, she became a songwriter and performer whose music focuses on the dangers of nuclear war, child abuse, opposition to U.S. military involvement in Latin America and her love of women. Ms. Near has publicly acknowledged her homosexuality.

In "Imagine My Surprise," she sings about the divergent roads women take in life:

"Rugged women gone before me

Paving paths like pioneers so often all alone

I dreamed of queens and Cinderellas

Facing disappointment when I was grown."

But she had trouble launching a recording career for herself. While audiences enjoyed her music, it did not excite record company executives.

"There was a point at which one person said he'd heard a record company executive say one of the problems with me as a pop singer is that there is no element of submission in my voice," said Ms. Near.

"So at that time that sort of crying female sound was really what they thought was selling. Now that's not the case. You don't find any element of submission in Cyndi Lauper's voice. But I think it's hard for people to remember that there was a time when women were not supposed to express opinions and it was really 'stand-by-your-man' time."

By starting her own company, Ms. Near found she could record her music without that type of submission. However, it wasn't easy.

"We discovered we were going to have to lay every brick down before we stepped on it," the 35-year-old singer said in an interview. She knew nothing about promotion or concert production, but found the best way to sell her records was through live performances.

Like most entrepreneurs, she started small, touring in church basements and other small halls. By 1978, debts were mounting.

"I was gonna close Redwood down. I was exhausted," Ms. Near said. But then she met her partners, who had been running a women's bookstore in Kansas City, Mo., which distributed Redwood's records.

They turned Redwood around. In 1984, Ms. Worley said, Redwood had revenues of about $750,000 and made a profit of about $10,000. This year she expects revenues to hit $1.1 million or more, with another small profit.

In recent years, Redwood has started selling albums by artists other than Ms. Near, although she remains the biggest seller.

This spring an album is due out featuring Ms. Near and folk singers Ronnie Gilbert, Arlo Guthrie and Pete Seeger.

Ms. Near is gaining recognition in the mainstream, even though her political views remain firmly on the left. Ms. magazine named her one of its 12 Women of the Year and put her picture on the cover of its January 1985 issue.

When her musical career is over, she knows how she'd like to be remembered: "I probably would want people to say that she did the best she could. That she really was a person who tried to do right by the little time we each have on this planet."

Character actor M. Emmet Walsh calls 'Blood Simple' his epitaph

By David Elliott
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Talking in his hotel room, M. Emmet Walsh refers to "Blood Simple" as "my epitaph. When they throw the last shovelful on me, maybe they'll say, 'Well, look at this.' The best movies somehow keep on going."

It seems a fairly bleak observation, but Walsh makes it in a funny way. And the mixture perfectly fits "Blood Simple," a macabre yet funny thriller for which Walsh, playing a low-down Texas gumshoe, is winning the cream reviews of his long career.

The low-budget, high-styled film is providing a fast career start for ingenue filmmakers Joel and Ethan Coen, and a good second wind for veteran Walsh, who has appeared in countless TV shows, plays (including "That Championship Season" on Broadway) and more movies than even trivia buffs recall.

He is delighted by the reviews and audience response, though he notes with a canny twinkle,

"The people in power aren't saying anything nice to me so far. They're afraid I'll ask for another thousand a week."

Walsh is a big, slouchy man, sort of a patented 50, with one of those potato faces stamped Character Actor. He got into "Blood Simple" "when I was making 'Silkwood' in Dallas, and my agent mentioned this low-budget thing two guys were

DINING GUIDE

This Week's Featured Restaurant:

Mi Taco is located at 7th Street and Mountain Avenue in Upland, directly south of the Mountaingreen Shopping Center.

Owners, Judy and Morry Miller of Claremont have operated the successful Mexican-American restaurant since its opening in 1966. 19 successful years can be attributed to Morry Miller's effectively incorporating his 30 years of restaurant experience into Mi Taco. Upon starting Mi Taco, both Mr. & Mrs. Miller made a commitment to establish a reputation for quality food at reasonable prices.

Mi Taco is open 24 hours and serves a satisfying variety of breakfast, lunch and dinner entrees.

Breakfast offerings include Mexican/American Continental Huevos Rancheros, Egg Burritos, Egg and Chorizo Burritos, Egg and Chili-Bean Burritos, Egg Sandwiches or Sausage and Egg Sandwiches. A great way to start your day!

For lunch or dinner or whenever you're hungry Mi Taco offers not only your traditional fast food Mexican/American entrees but also such tempting dishes as Burrito Ole, Taco Ole, Burrito Rancheros, Tostado or Chili-Bean Salad and a Mexican Soft Taco all of which are usually found only at higher priced Mexican Restaurants.

Mi Taco's Burrito Ranchero is a tasty combination of meat and beans with cheddar cheese, covered with their special and delicious homemade ranchero salsa and topped with sour cream and olive.

The Tostado or Chili-Bean Salad starts with a large crispy flour tortilla, then filled with beans and meat, lettuce, cheddar cheese and salsa. The mouth-watering combination is then topped with sour cream, guacamole and olive.

Mi Taco's Mexican Soft Taco consists of two soft corn tortillas filled with real shredded beef, guacamole and homemade fresh tomato salsa.

Fast food at Mi Taco means a short wait while your order is individually prepared fresh.

If you have time Mi Taco offers a relaxed cafe atmosphere where you may at your pace enjoy their fine food. Decorated in dark-greens, beige-tones, greenery, cottage windows, and European shutters, Mi Taco takes on the cafe-look which is popular with diners today. A comfortable garden atmosphere, seldom found at fast-food establishments, provides leisure dining whether inside or outside under covered patio tables.

"The entire atmosphere now fits with Mi Taco's food concept," says Miller. "Rather than just serving fast food, we serve FINE FOOD FAST."

And so portions individually prepared, fast service, friendly smiles and a cafe atmosphere are why Mi Taco "Loves To Be Compared."

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Hitchcock plot became reality for embezzler

NEW YORK — Was Alfred Hitchcock responsible for the embezzlement of a British bank back in the early 1960s? Possibly, according to "Alfred Hitchcock Presents: An Illustrated Guide to the Ten-Year Television Career of the Master of Suspense," by John McCarty and Brian Kelleher.

Luckily for Hitch though, he was just as responsible for nabbing the real culprit. An employee of a British bank embezzled a large amount of money in a way that duplicated a crime he'd apparently seen on an episode of the "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" TV series. The series originally aired between 1955 and 1965.

The embezzler's undoing, however, was that British police saw the same episode, enabling them to solve the crime and arrest the culprit.

In the TV episode, titled "Not The Running Type," the main character works at a bank, embezzles $200,000, then turns himself in to the police. While he admits to the crime, he refuses to reveal where he's hidden the stolen money. He is convicted and sent to prison for 12 years. Upon his release, he returns all of the $200,000 to the authorities, then leaves on an around-the-world vacation cruise, living off of the interest accumulated during his 12 years in jail.

The book quotes Henry Slesar, who wrote the original story, as saying that the crime was known as the Hitchcock Case in England.

"It (was) an exact duplication," Slesar said, "When police arrested the man they said to him: 'We saw the Hitchcock show, too'."

"There are those occasions when life does imitate art."

The episode, which was directed for TV by Arthur Hiller ("Silver Streak") and produced by Hitchcock's TV production company, was aired in the U.S. on Feb. 7, 1960.

The book documents the famous director's television career, the history behind the show and includes brief versions of the show's 359 episodes.

Although the show was last broadcast on NBC in 1965, it is still being shown in syndication in many stations around the U.S. A further revival of interest in the show is expected this month when NBC plans to broadcast a made-for-TV movie featuring remakes of four of the most popular episodes.

doing in Texas, and said maybe I should pass. I said I'd at least read it, and I was struck in the script by all the special effects with broken glass and fans and Venetian blinds, stuff that many experienced people won't try to do. How were these guys gonna manage it? I saw the character as kind of a cartoon, a Sidney Greenstreet role, and I fitted it in around 'Silkwood,' because the Coens had this thing organized like a commercial."

He took the role "for scale and a couple thousand a week expense money," but also had "a lot of fun. These guys are good. They don't know what can't be done. They just do it. I thought at first, well, I'll work out this character and maybe get to use him in a major movie down the line somewhere. So now it's a hit, and people are wondering who I am, after 20 years of watching me!"

Walsh got the role down fast — it was a speed movie all the way — but one rustic trick defeated him:

"Joel told me I had to blow a smoke ring to go just so, at Dan (Hedaya). I kept trying and couldn't do it. Joel said, 'That's all right, we've invented a machine to do it.' So we got the machine working behind my ear, but the rings weren't holding together long enough. Finally some little Texas girl who works props — a kid right off the farm — says, 'Aw, give me a cigarette!' And she blows them, but they're not big enough. So she says, 'Gimme a cigar.' This little gal! And she puffed on that thing until she got sick, and we got the shot."

This son of Vermont, whose "family has worked three generations on the border," had no trouble with his oozy Texas Gothic accent, proudly noting, "None of the Texas reviews have criticized it. I think you should just dust an accent on, not play it hard. When it's too good, it's just acting. I watched Henry Fonda play the stage manager in 'Our Town' with such a great New Hampshire accent it bothered me. Too much! Just give a flavor of it."

As a young man, Walsh studied marketing until "the dean told me that I had the lowest marks of anyone in seven years, so I figured I'd probably end up working at a gas station or supermarket."

Teachers' high expectation can lead to students' test cheating

By Rev. Lee Truman
Copley News Service

Mary Sue Marks is in the sixth grade. Her mother came to me because Mary Sue's teacher had called her in and confronted her with the evidence of her daughter's cheating on a test. Mary Sue is from a good home, loved by her parents, yet with a serious problem in honesty.

Despite what the Supreme Court says, I know there are going to be prayers in school as long as there are final examinations. I also know there is going to be cheating on those same examinations. The ingenious and laborious length that some of my fellow students went to in order to cheat left me puzzled. The logic of working that hard at cheating when it would take far less effort to learn the material escaped me.

In order to help Mary Sue and her mother, I tried to do my homework in what is known about cheating in the grammar school and high school levels.

The results of one study by Simpson and Baner show that a great many students are scrupulously honest until they sense a threat to their status or their rapport with their teacher.

The conclusion of this study came from testing a group of fifth graders by giving them a mathematics test. The children were told that if they made any mistakes on the test, they would be required to work that problem correctly 10 times. They were informed they were on their honor, although, in fact, they were watched for the study through a one-way mirror.

During this test a number of children made mistakes, but no one failed to hand in the correctly worked problems later. The test was given again, and this time they were to work 10 different problems for each one missed. Again, very few cheated and none of those who made mistakes failed to hand in the added assignment for errors.

For the last test, the procedures were changed. The children were told there was no penalty for making a mistake, but the teacher would be very disappointed if there were mistakes. She stated that she was certain that anyone as smart as the members of her class certainly would do very well on the examination.

The result from this kind of pressure was that there was a great deal of turning of heads and whispering during the test. The conclusion was that the teacher they loved and respected put these basically honest children in a position where they could not afford emotionally to consider the possibility of failure. They wanted the teacher to be proud of them.

Another finding of the study was that it was found that more girls cheated than boys, but when the boys did cheat they cheated in a much bigger way. One suggestion by the team of doctors to help with the problem of cheating was to eliminate the use of so many multiple choice or true-and-false questions. Teachers tend to use these more often because of the amount of work involved in correcting subjective answers.

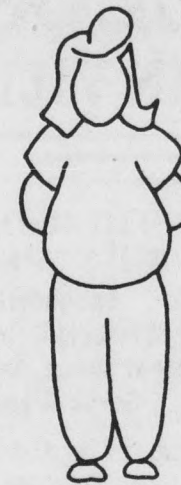

A great deal of attention has been given to individual learning, using specific learning objectives that are set down in contracts made between the students and the teacher. This eliminates the pressure on the student and gives a wider possibility for actual learning.

After talking to Mary Sue's mother, I went to the school and asked her teacher how many students had been cheating in her class, and the figure was proportionately very high. When she chose to remove the extremely high expectations from her students, the cheating dropped off in the class proportionately, and I am glad to relate that Mary Sue is doing quite well.

Volunteers needed by program

Volunteer Vital English needs volunteers to help non-English speaking families and/or individuals learn conversational English for daily use and emergency use and emergency situations.

VVE tutors teach English to non-English speaking people in Alta Loma, Chino, Claremont, Cucamonga, Diamond Bar, La Verne, Montclair, Ontario, Pomona, San Dimas and Upland. The regularly scheduled orientation session for prospective tutors will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon at the YWCA of the Greater Pomona Valley, 1787 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, across the street from the Pomona Valley Community Hospital and behind the Hamilton Drugs/Alpha Beta shopping center.

Volunteer tutors are not required to have previous teaching experience or knowledge of another language. Men and women who can volunteer two hours weekly to help someone learn to speak English are invited to attend.

For more information, write to Volunteer Vital English, 1787 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, CA 91767; or call, 622-2453.

Winners of poster contest revealed

Winners of the Rancho Cucamonga fourth Annual Spring Clean Sweep Poster Contest were announced recently.

The annual contest was split into a junior division for grades fourth through sixth and a senior division for grades seventh and eighth. More than 250 students from local elementary and junior high schools submitted posters.

Posters were judged for artistic style and attempts to illustrate the student's concern for controlling litter and maintaining a beautiful environment in Rancho Cucamonga.

Winners for first through third place received a cash award of $50, $30, or $20, respectively.

In the junior division, first through third place winners were Kristen Salsgiver, Alta Loma Elementary; Stephanie Hall, Alta Loma Elementary; and Heather Hayden, Valle Vista School.

Receiving honorable mentions in the junior division were Jamie Butter, Carnelian School; Amber Dimmick, Alta Loma Elementary; and Joseph AhQuin, Los Amigos.

First through third winners in the senior division were Alvin Pepito, Rancho Cucamonga Middle School; Jeff Danna, Rancho Cucamonga Middle School; and Kerry Cisneros, Alta Loma Junior High School.

COINS

By Gary L. Palmer
Copley News Service

There's an old numismatic saying that goes like this: "Buy the book; then buy the coin."

In the case of a pair of recently released numismatic tomes, however, buying the coin might be cheaper.

Nonetheless, Krause Publications, the hobby giant from little Iola, Wis., is one of the foremost publishers of books significant to the hobby.

The dyed-in-the-wool collector is going to want one of the two for his numismatic library and the other is certain to be coveted by hobby specialists — those who pay attention to the myriad of coin auctions held each year.

At 1,848 pages, "Numismatic Bibliography" easily is the world's largest and most outstanding listing of numismatic literature.

Compiled by renowned scholar Elvira Clain-Stefanelli, "Numismatic Bibliography" provides a massive yet usable compilation of book titles, article titles, authors and general information about numismatic research materials.

More than 18,300 listings are grouped under the headings of General References, Monetary and Economic Theories and Evolution of Money.

Listings under General References include handbooks and numismatic dictionaries.

Monetary and Economic Theories covers titles from ancient to modern times, with special sections on the history of prices and banking. Evolution of Money is a period-by-period survey of literature focusing on countries and geographical areas, beginning with the Roman empire.

An invaluable but not inexpensive tool, "Numismatic Bibliography" sells for $75.

1984, providing a convenient, time-saving way to locate and study auction results.

Robert Wilhite compiled this catalog, which covers 69,123 lots from trend-setting auctions coast to coast.

At $50 a copy it is not geared for the "best-seller" list, but that may be a small price to pay for the avid numismatic auction buff.

Orders for either of the books should be sent directly to Krause Publications, 700 E. State St., Iola, WI. Add $2 each to cover postage and handling.

PETS

Q. Our Sealyham terrier is going to have her first litter of puppies in a couple weeks.

The owners of the kennel where we bought our dog told us we should take the bitch and her litter to our veterinarian within the first week following birth for tail docking and dewclaw removal.

What is involved in these procedures? Why are they necessary? Will the puppies suffer?

A. Tail docking and dewclaw removal should be done within the first 48 to 72 hours following birth. Most newborn puppies apparently experience very little pain when these procedures are done. In fact, most puppies go back to nursing or back to sleep immediately following tail docking and dewclaw removal.

Both of these procedures should be done only by a veterinarian since veterinarians are trained to shape and taper the tail stub so that a satisfactory appearance will result. The ideal tail length varies among breeds of dogs. Many potential champions have been ruined because the tail was docked too short.

Rubber bands and other tourniquet-like devices should not be used to dock tails. These can result in serious infections or excessive scarring.

While many breed associations require that front dewclaws be removed, it is advisable to remove rear dewclaws on all breeds. They serve no useful purpose and may seriously injure an eye while the dog is scratching or playing. Also, when dewclaws are left intact, they often interfere with running and cause injury if accidentally torn off.

The bitch should be taken to the veterinarian at the time of tail docking and dewclaw removal so the veterinarian can examine her for any possible problems resulting from the whelping. Based on this physical examination, the veterinarian can give any needed advice regarding nutrition or special care during the nursing period.

Likewise, at this time each puppy should be examined carefully for any physical abnormalities, such as cleft palate or the absence of an anal sphincter.

The puppies' toenails should be clipped at approximately two-week intervals while nursing. This will help avoid scratching or other injury to the bitch's mammary glands.

HOBBIES

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

I asked a wine collector, "What is the best Barolo you've ever tasted?" and the reply was somewhat predictable:

"It was a 1971, I think. I had it about two years ago. Marvelous wine ..."

I asked who made it, and the collector couldn't recall.

I asked another wine collector the same question:

"It was a 1976 from Conterno, I think," he replied. "Or was it a '78?"

Such hesitant and tentative replies never would be accorded to Bordeaux. The most memorable of Bordeaux wines stand out like a beacon in the night. My most memorable Bordeaux was a 1945 Chateau Latour I had three years ago. The other wine collectors likewise were able to recall with ease their favorite Bordeaux: 1929 Chateau Lafite and 1961 Chateau Margaux.

Yet, as I have said before, people don't pay proper attention to Italian wine, and thus is Barolo ignored.

Barolo probably is Italy's greatest wine. There may be some who will vote for Taurasi, Sassacaia, Montepulciano or Caramignano, and certainly there are those who argue that the usually expensive Brunello di Montalcino is the best wine made in the world.

But Barolo is the acknowledged king of Italian vino. It was the first wine in Italy to be vinified dry, in the French manner, and aged in oak, the way the French do. It was one of the first to be exported, and it was one of the first Italian wines recognized as having staying power, with potential to improve in the bottle.

As with all great wines, it possesses at its best a multitude of aromas and flavors. Victor Hazan, in his book "Italian Wine," says:

"A heavy, dense, rubbery scent of tar muscles past the ethereal ones of faded rose, violet and almond. The intriguing alternation of light and heavy aromas, flowery and tarry, is one through which we learn to identify not only Barolo, but most wines from the nebbiolo grape. In a fully mature Barolo it is accompanied by other sensations that may recall tree bark, leather, pepper or tobacco."

Clearly this is a monumental achievement; not even great Bordeaux can offer such intriguing and complex scents.

Yet it is that tarry component that tends to override so many Barolos, and when that element is too strong, too dominant, the wine can be hard to like when youthful. And this makes understanding young Barolo such a hard task.

Most Barolos need time in the bottle to yield their best faces. And the amount of time needed varies depending on the vintage. In the poor years, the wine becomes drinkable sooner; in the great vintages (such as 1978), the wine stays hard and full for decades.

The style of Barolo once was monstrous: coarse and laden with tannin. That made the wine so hard to like when young that it hurt the image of Barolo.

So producers like Renato Ratti and Pio Boffa began instituting new methods to the Piedmont region about 1975. In the last few years that style change has become noticeable in lighter wines, but with as much complexity as before.

Some purists will argue that the wines have suffered for all that. I doubt it. Although we won't know for some time whether these newer-style wines will carry the same timber into the next century, I suspect the wines will be fine.

Moreover, they are good values today. Even the best of the producers charges less than $20 for good Barolo Riserva (riserva wines are aged longer in the producer's cellar and are generally bigger, richer wines). Most Barolos today sell for $10 or less.

Back to my question regarding the best Barolos ever tasted. My most memorable Barolos have been a 1968 Giuseppe Mascarello and a 1967 Granducca. The Mascarello was muscular, full-bodied wine with grand intensity. The latter wine was lighter, more delicate in texture, but with an intoxicating aroma of cherries.

Bob Mills, a collector of Italian wine, says he can't choose one Barolo as the very best he has had, since the range of styles is so different. He has had a number of 1961s that were very impressive and still showed long life ahead of them. Two of the best Barolos he says he has had recently were a 1971 Conterno and a 1971 Franco-Fiorina.

Among currently available wines, the 1978 Angelo Gaja ($20) and 1978 Bruno Giacosa ($18) are exceptional.

Open house to follow PTA voting

Dona Merced School will hold an open house May 22 after PTA officer elections are held at 7 p.m.

In conjunction with the open house, the Spring Book Fair will be held. The school is located at 10333 Palo Alto in Rancho Cucamonga.

The PTA also will sponsor its annual Family Chicken Dinner in the school's multipurpose room June 4 6 p.m.

Chicken and beverages will be provided by the PTA, while families attending the dinner are asked to bring salads or desserts.

Students and parents recently honored the school's faculty and staff with Teacher/Staff Appreciation Week. The employees were honored with balloons, apples, candy kisses, carnations and a salad luncheon.

The PTA also helped students select gifts for their mothers by providing a Mother's Day Boutique. All gift items were handmade and were at a reasonable cost.

Pioneer students see Challenger shuttle touch down

When the Challenger shuttle touched down last week at Edwards Air Force Base, 102 Pioneer Junior High School students were in the front row of spectators cheering it home.

The students all made the honor roll during the last trimester. The shuttle trip to the desert base outside of Lancaster was a way of congratulating them for their work, according to Principal Roger Schulte.

Schulte had promised the students a special surprise trip for their academic accomplishments but he didn't announce the destination until a week ago.

"I was one of the gang that saw it. It really was exciting," Schulte said. "We felt this would be an experience some might not have and the timing was perfect."

Schulte called the base's public relations department and made the arrangements. The principal, several teachers and the students were given VIP treatment and front row seats.

The Pioneer group left Upland at 4:30 a.m. and was on the base before 7 a.m. Challenger's seven astronauts and their mini zoo flew home at 9:11 a.m. amid two sonic booms that could be heard throughout the Los Angeles area.

The Challenger's seven-day science expedition covering 2.9 million miles was over.

So was the students' day away from school. The group had

Microcomputer class offered

Chaffey Adult School is taking enrollment for three classes related to microcomputers.

Introduction to Microcomputers is designed for those individuals who have not had any experience with microcomputers.

In hands-on activities with Apple IIe microcomputers, the course will cover programming in BASIC and use of selected word processing packages. The course will provide an overview of computer operations including terminology, computer components and their function and software operations. Class begins June 17 and will meet Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m.

Introduction to Word Processing is geared for those individuals who have not had any experience in the microcomputer field and for those who have had a broad introduction to microcomputers and are interested in gaining experience in the specialty area of word processing through Applewriter II-E.

Word processing allows students to create text and then edit it as much or as many times as needed. Also available will be a group of powerful functions in word processing to enable one to create customized reports, "personalized" form letters, perform repetitive functions and others. Class begins June 18, from 7 to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Introduction to Microcomputers and Applications is directed toward students who have had no previous experience or knowledge in microcomputers as well as those who want to increase their knowledge for more effective comprehensive use of their computer systems. For more information, call 983-2010.

Chino exhibitors fair scheduled for June

The Chino Valley Chamber of Commerce and the Ambassadors Committee will host the second annual Exhibitors Fair at the Chino Junior Fairgrounds June 1 and 2.

It will feature displays of merchandise from local businesses and exhibits of services available in the community. In observance of Dairy Month, the fair will also showcase dairy products and equipment.

The program will include a milking contest between chamber President Dick Carr and Chino Mayor Pro Tem Fred Aguiar. A Pinto pony show, petting zoo, and karate and clogging demonstrations are among the planned activities.

The fair will be June 1 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and June 2 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission will be free. Displays at the fair will be limited to chamber members. For more information, people may call Diana Larson at 627-6177.

One-day workshop planned May 18

"Healthy Mothers — Healthy Babies," a one-day workshop will be presented from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. May 18 at the Chaffey College cafeteria.

The workshop will be sponsored by the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation and Student Nurses Association of California, and is open to expectant mothers, women planning to become pregnant and those working in the field of child birth education. It's designed to answer questions about pregnancy, child birth options, bonding and early child care.

Program highlights will include a maternity fashion show, exhibits, door prizes, demonstrations, a discussion and presentation by Jazzercise representatives of exercises appropriate for an expectant mother.

A luncheon prepared by the Chaffey College foods department will be served to all guests. Cost for the program is $2.50, which covers the cost of the luncheon.

Free child care is available to the first 45 participants to register. Children will be given a nutritious snack and lunch at the Chaffey College Child Care Center.

Sylvia Pompura, R.N. and professor of nursing at Chaffey, is chairwoman for the event. "This is the first such workshop we have given in this area, we hope it is so successful it will be repeated in other areas," Pompura said.

Check-in begins at 8:30 a.m. To register or for more information, call the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation at 889-0803 or 824-1203.

Scots travel for playoff opener

In only his second year at the helm, Upland High School baseball coach Mike Alonso has already guided the Highlanders to a pair of CIF playoff berths.

Now Alonso can only hope the second time is charm for the Scots, as they travel to Anaheim Friday for a first-round battle with Western High School at 3:15 p.m.

Last season, after capturing the Baseline League title with a 12-2 finish, the Highlanders were bounced from the CIF 3A playoffs in the first round with a 6-5 loss to El Dorado.

This year, things didn't come together quite as easily for Alonso. But despite listing only four seniors on varsity while starting four sophomores, the Upland coach was still able to guide his club to a 13-10 regular season finish and third place in the final league standings.

"I feel good about this team. I'm happy we made the playoffs, especially as young as we are," says Alonso. "We're giving our young kids experience, and it's a nice thing for our seniors."

"But," he added with sarcastic laugh, "they gave us another Orange County team."

In Western, the Highlanders face the Orange League champs. Currently sporting a 17-7 record, the Pioneers were the 1984 Pomona Elks Tournament champs. But while Western did beat Chaffey 9-3 in this year's opening round of the Elks Tournament, the Pioneers lost a 1-0 decision to Damien in the second round.

"We're going to give it our best try Friday," said Alonso, adding that "everything from here on out is icing on the cake. We wanted to make the playoffs and we did. From here on out we just want to play well and have fun."

Upland Pop Warner begins registration

Although the football season is still three months away, the Upland Pop Warner Junior League Football Association is getting started.

The first of two periods to register for the 1985 fall season will be held Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m. at Upland High School near the tennis courts on the Foothill Blvd. parking lot. The second session is set for June 5 from 6-8 p.m.

Both boys and girls ages 7 through 14 can participate.

Parents are asked to bring the child's birth certificate and latest report card. The Pop Warner season begins Aug. 1.

"We specially urge parents who are unsure whether their child wants to participate to come out and ask questions," said Pop Warner official Dick Norby. "I think they'll be pleasantly pleased with the answers they'll get to their questions and concerns."

Additional information is available by calling 981-1868, 982-7745 or 946-8653.

AYSO schedules first of three sign up dates

The first of three registration sessions for Upland AYSO (American Youth Soccer Organization) Region 32 will be held Saturday at Pioneer Junior High School.

Registration is open to boys and girls ranging in age from 5 to 18. AYSO officials have announced the schedules for Divisions I and II have been accelerated to prevent a conflict with the CIF playing schedule.

In addition to players, those persons wishing to coach or referee may sign up at Pioneer, 245 W. 18th Street in Upland. The sessions will begin at 9 a.m. and run until 3 p.m.

For additional information, interested persons can call 982-6200.

VIP bowling league winners revealed

Rancho Cucamonga VIP senior bowling league has completed its 31 weeks of competitive bowling.

Winning by one game played the last week of the league was Team No. 8, made up of Barbara Hartline, Zeld Davis, Lou Shunkwiler and Steve Davis.

The second place team was Team No. 4, made up of Melva Ranstead, Lucia Roseetti, Matt Hayne and Elmer Lisenbe. Fourteen teams vied for honors.

Season honors included: Team-High Series, of 2472, went to Team No. 5, Bernardine Reininger, Forrest Thompson, Fred Reininger and Howard Theiss; Team High Game, of 888, went to Team No. 1, Fran Solters, Woody Sampson, Mae Sampson and Jess Solters.

SCR Series went to George Solters, 657 and to Clara Abrahams, 517. SCR Game went to Elmer Lisenbe, 235 and to Mae Sampson with 210. HCP Series went to Fred Reininger, 672 and Melva Ranstead, 682. HCP Game went to Bud Weitfeldt, 264 and Nelda Lovgren, 254.

lunch, boarded their two buses and headed home.

"It was neat. I've been following it on television but seeing it land was kind of the climax of the whole thing," said Scott Borbenkircher, seventh grade.

Seventh grader Megan Schulte said the Monday landing was the first time she has seen any of the space program's activities. "It was exciting," she said.

For some students the trip was fun. For others a way of missing most of the school day. But for Michele Graham it was a special trip.

"I thought it was pretty exciting. I felt a sense of pride because before it landed they played the 'Star Spangled Banner' over the area. Everyone was just looking up for it and there it was," the eighth grader said. "I didn't know what to expect but it was great."

PARENTS ALERT

It is not always necessary to wait until all permanent teeth are in to correct overcrowding (Crooked teeth) or any extremely closed bite. In many cases, in our office, correction has been started as young as Seven years of age. Completed, in many cases, in two years.

(WE USE REMOVABLE ORTHOPEDIC APPLIANCES AND NO CEMENTING HAS BEEN NECESSARY).

In all the years I have specialized in pediatric dentistry no halucinogenic or sedation drugs have ever been, (or ever will be) used on my child patients. Call for an oral diagnosis. By appointment only.
